SIX BODIES FROM RUINS OF LENOX FIRE

(Special from United Press.)

Lenox, Mass., April 12.—At nine o'clock this morning no more bodies had been found in the ruins of the fire which destroyed $500,000 worth of property here yesterday and caused the loss of six lives.

Tons of water are being poured on the still blazing ruins rendering the work of recovery of any bodies there impossible, until the masonry has cooled. At 10 this morning the selectmen met in session to consider ways and means to relieve the suffering of those rendered homeless by the fire and the fire department met for further action. Mrs. Nelson Root, George Root and Walter Root, who suffered severe burns in their attempts to escape from the Clifford Building, are reported at the hospital as doing as well as could be expected from the nature of their injuries and no anxiety is felt as to their condition.

The fire is supposed to have started from spontaneous combustion in the stock of James Clifford & Sons Company, hardware dealers. When they pentine, paints, oils and dynamite stored in the basement.

George Root, who lived in the upper story of the Clifford Building, was awakened by smoke that rolled into his room from a partly covered chimney hole. He called his brother and mother, and they found the front stairs in their night clothes, shouting to the other occupants of the upper floors as they went. They found the front door in flames, but the men breached it open and they dashed through.

The Roots had barely crossed the street before there was a terrific explosion in the building behind them, and in an instant the Clifford Building was all adame. This explosion was heard for a distance of six miles, shattered windows within a wide radius and caused the fire alarm to ring.

Horace Perrill and his wife, other occupants of the top floor, aroused by the shouts of the Roots, had got half way down the front stairs when they saw the flames leaping up to bar their exit. Three women were below them, crying to get out through the front door, but Perrill saw that the attempt was useless. He rushed his wife through a long corridor to the back stairs, and even saw her safely.

In the Clifford Building where the fire started, six lives were lost. The dead are Edward C. Ventres, 41 years old, a contracting electrician; Mrs. Edward C. Ventres, 35; Lenore Ventres, 12, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Ventres; Miss Alice French, 41, a bookkeeper; Miss Belle Cook, 40, daughter of Mr. H. Hiram Cook, bookkeeper in Curtis Hotel and Miss Mary Sparks, 26, a school teacher.

MAY RESTORE CUT SALARIES

New Haven, April 12.—While a report that the reduced salaries of the upper class of officials of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company will be returned soon to the old figures is authoritatively denied, it is regarded as probable that these salaries will be restored at or about the beginning of the next fiscal year in July provided the present rate of the earnings of the company compares favorably with the rate of the same year. The salaries in question were reduced a year ago at a 5 per cent. rate for salaries between $1,200 and $2,000 a year and 10 per cent. on salaries over $2,000. These reductions have been met with considerable opposition. The return of the old salary rate is dependent on the earnings of the dividend this fiscal year, which the present rate of earnings seem reasonably to assure. The total reduction a year ago, amounted to about $120,000 a year.

ENGINE STOLEN FROM NEW HAVEN RAILROAD SIDING

Fishkill Landing, N. Y., April 12.—Officials of the Central New England Railroad here and at Hopewell Junction are investigating the disappearance of a fifty-ton New Haven locomotive at 4 o'clock this morning. It was either stolen or moved of its own accord from the siding at New Haven Road at Hopewell Junction, fourteen miles from Fishkill Landing.

PEACH BUDS SAFE

Hartford, April 12.—Peach growers hereabouts are congratulating themselves on the fact that, although the freeze of Saturday night came rather late in the season, the crops will not suffer. L. C. Root of Farmington said that the buds were not far enough developed to be affected. The orchards of J. H. Hale of Glastonbury are likewise unharmed by the sudden cold. Some of the buds were stiffened up a bit, but the sun of yesterday loosened them up early and not the least harmful result was expected. Both of these growers say that the prospects for a gilt-edged crop are excellent.

MURDER OF MABEL PAIGE IS RECALLED

(Special from United Press.)

Auburndale, April 12.—Another sensational chapter in the life of young Charles L. Tucker, electrocuted for the murder of Mabel Paige at Weston in 1907, was recalled yesterday when it became known that Miss Mae Clough of Effingham, N. H., a prepossessing young woman of 30, had appealed to the Supreme Court for recognition of her claim as the legal widow of young Tucker.

Miss Clough asserts that in 1893 she met Tucker at Ossipee, N. H., and after a brief courtship the couple were married at Wolfboro, the Rev. M. Stillings officiating. According to the statement of the young woman the marriage took place seven months before his marriage to Miss Grace Osborn, his other wife. James H. Vahey, another witness, said that Clough strenuously maintains her claim, offering to produce her marriage certificate to sustain her statement.

WHERE IS MAN WHO RAN OVER WILLIE TYER?

After searching for two days Detective Hackett this morning found the man who ran over Willie Tyer at the corner of Park and Railroad avenues last Friday night. He is doing nicely and will recover. The police are making an effort to stop the reckless driving of a class of foreign born residents who do not seem to have much consideration for the rights of pedestrians. The friends of the boy are pressing the prosecution against Kerchi, but it is doubtful if a conviction can be had. The parties concerned will present their evidence at police headquarters this evening.

WALL STREET TO-DAY.

(Special from United Press.)

New York, April 12.—The stock market started with a continuation of strength many stocks, the first of which were moving up one point or more while nearly everything traded in showed some gain. Industrials were again prominent and showed in the speculative interest to a great extent. The copper shares were all active and made material advances. The railroad list was established on a factiously higher range. Mexican Central was one of the features of the early trading.

U. S. M.—The market advanced strongly through the first hour although there was evidence in some stocks including Reading and Union Pacific of a slight decline. This decline came from a time buying orders appeared in many of the other issues. Union Pacific fell at the highest figure of the day.

POOL TOURNAMENT AT BRIDGEPORT CLUB.

The big lead of the Blues over the Reds in the pool tournament at the Bridgeport club was brought down a bit Saturday night. In the first game H. McDallen, (Red) won his game from W. B. Wakelee, (Blue) 100 to 31. This was the lead of the Blues down from 140 to 71. V. H. Kincaid, (Red) then lost his game to C. H. Gernert, (Blue) by the score of 100 to 77, increasing the lead of the Blues to 94, which is the standing to date.

DEATH CHAIR CLAIMS YOUTH AT SING SING

(Special from United Press.)

Ossining, N. Y., April 12.—Bernard Carlin, a 20 year old youth who killed his mother in Brooklyn on April 8th last year, was electrocuted in Sing Sing prison a few minutes after six o'clock today. Only one shock was necessary and the boy was pronounced dead. It was one of the most successful executions ever held in the local prison.

Carlin walked with a firm step to the death chair. To Rev. Father C. V. Mahoney, pastor of St. Augustine's church he made the following statement to be given out when his death occurred: "I was suffering from a hallucination when I killed my mother but I realize that this does not excuse me. Since my conviction I have come under the influence of religion and I realize the enormity of my crime. A man's best friend is his mother and I am ready and anxious to die."

Carlin's two sisters bid farewell to their brother last evening and from that time he spent the hours to the time of the walk to the chair in prayer with the priest.

Most of Carlin's life was spent in orphan asylums and reformatories. He was discharged from the House of Refuge a few hours before the crime. He blamed his mother for his bad eyes which were very weak and while in prison decided to kill her. He bought a revolver and shot her in the back of the head when she was alone in the house.

In sentencing him the presiding justice said: "Your crime was one of the most abominable acts in the history of humanity. You are a monster who has no right to live."

PETROSINO IS BURIED TODAY WITH HONORS

(Special from United Press.)

New York, April 12.—With honors such as were never before paid to a simple policeman whose claim for fame was simply that he had done his duty with the result that he was murdered by the criminals that he feared him.

Leads the set of Police Joseph Petrosino was buried today. But the funeral took on a sinister note through the intimation conveyed to the authorities that Italian criminals, who were not satisfied with the death of the man they feared most, planned another outrage during the funeral.

Long before the hour set for the funeral the police began to gather on Lafayette street, near the home of the dead officer. All were kept on the move by three hundred uniformed policemen detailed for that purpose. Officers also kept track of the movements of the crowd from adjacent streets.

The funeral procession moved from the house to old St. Patrick's where Petrosino had been a regular attendant. Uniformed men marched on each side of the hearse and the carriages containing the mourners, and the curiosity seekers were kept at a distance.

As a last tribute to the dead man nearly every city official, judges and representatives of civic organizations were in line while flags on all city and county buildings were at half mast.

Two regiments of police and squadrons of mounted men, a battalion of firemen in command of Chief Croker and all of the officials of the fire and police departments were in line. Behind them came every Italian society in the greater city, the line being probably the longest ever seen at a funeral in this city. At the church the Rev. Father Lavelle and Rev. Father Carney officiated and a solemn high mass of requiem was sung. The old church, once the fashionable of the city, but now one of the most modest, was far too small and only the invited guests were permitted to enter by the police. Following the services the procession marched through the streets, passing police headquarters where Petrosino was stationed for many years, on fashionable Fifth avenue and across to the cemetery. At the Manhattan end of the bridge most of the men on foot dropped out but four troops of mounted police went all the way to the cemetery while flanking parties of bicycle police kept the party in sight all the way.

All along the route of march thousands gathered and stood bareheaded as the body of the dead policeman passed.

Promises to the Dying.

A clergyman, discussing unhappy love affairs, said:

"Many a love tragedy is caused by a husband's promise to a dying wife that he will not marry again. He thinks when he makes this promise that it will be easy to keep. Whether it is easy or hard to keep, it is a promise rarely if ever broken. Time and time again widowers have sought me out for advice on this subject. They are in love, but they promised their dead wives not to marry again. Shall they break or keep this promise? I can only advise them to do as their conscience dictates. At the same time I think it is selfish of dying wives to extract such promises from their broken hearted husbands. Such promises, by the way, are rarely extracted by dying husbands from broken hearted wives. But then, when the dead husband's will is read it is usually found that if the widow marries again the money is all taken from her. So it comes to the same thing in the end, doesn't it?"—New York Press.

Famous Collection of Antlers.

Of the famous collections of antlers formed in the seventeenth century only two or three have escaped the general fate of conflagrations, sieges and pillage. One of these is in Moritzburg, the king of Saxony's historical hunting castle, near Dresden, while in the celebrated gun gallery in Dresden itself are to be seen in an unrivaled show the wonderfully inland arms used by the elector. The great banqueting hall of the castle of Moritzburg is one of the sights with which no doubt many a traveled reader has been charmed. It is a chamber of noble proportions, sixty-six feet long by thirty-four wide and thirty-eight feet high. On its otherwise unadorned white walls hang seventy-one pairs of magnificent antlers, which one may describe as the most famous of their kind in the world. Not a single one carries less than twenty-four times or is less than 200 years old, while some are probably double that age.

A Celebrated Clock.

The art of the clockmaker has achieved many remarkable triumphs during many centuries. Sometimes it is a clock wonderful for the complexity of its movements and its busy population of automata that attracts our admiration, like that in the Cathedral of Strassburg. At other times the immense size of the machinery and the dials excite astonishment. This is the case with the celebrated clock in the tower of the Church of St. Rombaut at Mechlin. A writer in La Nature thinks this clock possesses the largest dials that exist in the world. There are four of them, one on each side of the great square tower, and their extreme diameter is nearly thirty-seven and one-half feet. The figures showing the hours are nearly six and one-half feet high, and the hands have a length of nearly twelve feet.

Who Gets Your Vote?

"Do you see that man there?" remarked a barber to a customer in his chair. "Well, he has had one and the same job for the past forty-seven years and has been married all that time, and his wife has never at any time during that period known what salary her husband was getting. The wife gets so much a week and no more, and has never been able to learn what amount of money her husband has been receiving in exchange for his labor. Now, what bothers me is which should have the diamond medal—I say diamond, as in this case the finest would seem to be needed—the man for being able to so long baffle a woman's curiosity or the woman for surviving so long an unsatisfied curiosity."—Columbus Dispatch.

A Fearful Duel.

The most terrible duel fought at any time in Paris was the one between Colonel D., an old Bonapartist officer, and M. de G. of the Gardes du Corps, a mere youth, but of herculean strength. The two men, lashed together so as to leave their right arms free, were armed with short knives, placed in a hackney coach and driven at a tearing gallop around the Place de la Concorde. They were taken out of the coach dead. The colonel had eighteen stabs, the youth only four, but one of these had pierced his heart.

Noses Out of Joint.

When I was a girl, the aristocratic nose was high, beautifully modeled, rising in a delicately waving ridge and at the tip standing well out from the face and not turned up. But now the fashion has completely changed. The pretty women one sees portrayed in illustrated papers and magazines very seldom have much to speak of in the way of noses.—Dowager's London Chronicle.

The Difficulty About Our Composers.

"Who is your favorite composer?" inquired the artistic person. "I can't say just at this moment," answered Mr. Cumrox, with an appealing glance at his wife, "but it's somebody whose music I can't remember and whose name I can't pronounce."—Washington Star.
